Endowment for Health Elects Four New Board Members

The Endowment for Health, New Hampshire's largest health foundation, has elected four new members to its Board of Directors who bring a wealth of nonprofit, academic and government experience to the foundation.

Joining the Endowment for Health Board are:

Karin Caruso, who will serve as Endowment for Health Treasurer. Caruso is Interim Dean of the Business School at Southern New Hampshire University, where she also teaches accounting. Ms. Caruso resides in Stratham.

Eddie Edwards, Chief of Enforcement for the NH State Liquor Commission. He is responsible for the enforcement and licensing of alcohol and tobacco for the state of New Hampshire. Mr. Edwards resides in Hampton.

Randy Foose, NH House of Representatives and Finance Committee member. Foose is also Special Assistant to the President and Adjunct Professor at Vermont Law School. Mr. Foose resides in New London.

Esteban Lopez, Director of Diversity Initiatives for the New Hampshire College & University Council, a nonprofit consortium of seventeen public and private higher education institutions serving more than 70,000 students throughout the state. Mr. Lopez also has an extensive finance background. Mr. Lopez resides in Goffstown.

"We are pleased to welcome these leaders to our Board of Directors," said Dr. James W. Squires, president of the Endowment for Health. "Their expertise and service to our state make them invaluable advisors to the Endowment as we work to improve the health of the people of New Hampshire."
